Headline:
Mostly dry tonight. Frequent showers and sunny spells on Thursday.

This Evening and Tonight:
Rain clearing to the south through the evening and showers generally easing. A dry night for most with many clear spells, though some showers will continue in the north and develop along the west coast before dawn. Rural frost likely. Minimum temperature -1 deg C (30 deg F).

Thursday:
After a dry and bright start, patchy cloud develops over the region, giving sunny spells and scattered, occasionally heavy, showers through the day. Feeling cold. Maximum temperature 12 deg C (54 deg F).

Outlook for Friday to Sunday:
Sunny spells and frequent, occasionally heavy, showers each day. Daytime temperatures cool but gradually warming. Largely dry overnight, with clear spells and a continued chance of rural frosts.
